MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT: 26 September 1989 Meeting Concerning the Transfer of the Murphy Collection to the National Archives Under the CIA Historical Review Program

PARTICIPANTS: Richard H. Morefield, Department of State (DOS)
Edwin A. Thompson, National Archives and Records Administration (NARA), Kenneth McDonald, Armand Vallieres,
Eunice Evans, John Carver and members of the Historical Review Staff,
Central Intelligence Agency (CIA)

1. Background: The Murphy Collection--put together by long-time State Department official Raymond E. Murphy--includes documents spanning four decades from 1917 to 1958. Mr. Murphy was charged in the 1920s with studying the international Communist movement in the United States, to judge its subservience to Moscow. Former Ambassador Loy Henderson described the collection as among the most useful in tracking Communist Party efforts to foment revolutionary activities and to penetrate the U.S. Government. The collection consists mainly of newspaper clippings, Department of State documents, and a few other agency documents as well as a small number of CIA documents. Some of the State documents refer to CIA presence, activities, and information. CIA came into possession of this collection sometime in the late 1950s or early 1960s; NARA designated the records as permanent in approximately 1968; and the records were accepted into CIA's Historical Review Program in 1989.
